Students who completed the 45-Hour Salesperson's Qualifying course prior to July 1, 2008

- who did not activated a license
- who let their license lapse for 2 years or more*
- who wish to become a broker

must take the gap course covering the newly added topics, in order to activate a license.

*If you have proof of an expired Salesperson's license you do not need to take the Gap course, but you will have to retake the New York State Exam. Proof of previous licensure can be the Broker's desk copy of your license, your pocket card or proof of payment to the Department of State for the initial license fee. School certificates are not considered proof of previous licensure.
